What Is Home Health Care?

Home Health Care consists of Medical Social Services, Occupational Therapy, Physical Therapy, Speech Therapy, Certified Home Health Aide and Caregiver Services. These services are administered in the patient's home by licensed and professional home health staff. The staff are trained and experienced in home health care. These services may be intermittent visits or continuous care over an extended period of time.

Home Health Care is an increasingly popular and cost effective method of receiving health care services in the comfort of the patient's home. The services can range from in-home nursing care, to ongoing assistance with activities of daily living.

Advances in Home Care are made possible due to many technological advances that allow procedures that were only provided in the hospital setting, infusion therapy, dialysis, chemotherapy and wound care, to be provided in the patient's home. In the future, more and more people will receive much of their medical care in the comfort of their own home.

When Is Home Health Care Appropriate?

- For an illness or injury that does not require hospitalization
- Following a hospital stay
- To care for an elderly family member
- While recovering from an accident, fall, stroke, heart attack, knee replacement, hip replacement, etc.
- Diabetic Management
